

The Root Problem

Chapter Thirteen

THE FINAL SOLUTION

The Reclamation Amendment

Following is the Reclamation Manifesto's first suggested amendment to the United States Constitution that will be submitted to the current 50 states for ratification:

“This Constitution is fully rooted in Common Law and as such fully empowers the People, the citizens, of these United States of America. Such empowerment is inviolable under any and all conditions.

Further, people, persons, human beings are individual sentient biological entities that are rooted in spirituality, no more, no less. Spirituality relates to alternative dimensions of existence of what is known as life and which is a part of the world of metaphysics. Such world does not necessarily have anything whatever to do with the existence or non-existence of a god or gods.

Such belief in a god or gods is an individual and/or group belief that this Constitution fully supports as well as the practice thereof, if any, so long as such practice is not detrimental to the nation or in opposition to any part of this Constitution. Further, this Constitution does not embrace, nor will it support, any such belief or practice in any way, manner, shape or form.

Any and all amendments to this Constitution, past, present and future, shall be considered as rooted in Common Law in full empowerment of the people and, this particular amendment, in its entirety and in its full meaning, can never be modified by amendment to this Constitution or by any other vehicle of change in any way, manner, shape or form unless approved by two-thirds of the People at a new constitutional convention.

Further, this Constitution under Common Law, of, by and for the People, shall always and forever be the primary legal jurisdiction, of, by and for the People, superseding all other legal jurisdictions and bodies of law.

As of the date, hour and minute of ratification of this Amendment, the Federal Government of the United States shall be dissolved and any contracts, agreements, etc. that may have been hidden or withheld from the sovereign People of the sovereign states shall be abrogated and made non-existent. The new Federal Government of the United States shall be resurrected from the old in the blink of an eye and begin its new life free of any and all encumbrance.

Concurrent with the resurrection of the Federal Government, the People, the citizens of the United States shall become as the fourth branch of the government: The Oversight Branch. This Oversight Branch shall be headed by a parliament elected by We the People. Such parliament shall consist of one representative for every million citizens based on the most recent census and comprising all the States of the Union. The duty of the Parliament is to approve or disapprove by a simple majority of those present any act put forth by the Executive, Legislative, or Judicial branches of the government which may conceivably have the force of law. Any disapproval is the Doctrine of Nullification in practice. All rules, regulations and methods with regard to the functioning of the Parliament, the election of its members and their term of service are expressly reserved to the People. Parliament shall present and the People shall vote. The initial members of Parliament shall be selected by the various state governments apportioned according to population and put before the people of the respective states for a vote.

In making its determinations, the People's Parliament must ensure that all other branches of the Federal Government properly interpret all the various elements of this constitution. Proper interpretation is described as follows:

Be as expansive in your interpretation of the various clauses contained in the constitution as you desire so long as you do not infringe in any way manner shape or form on the unalienable rights and/or sovereignty of any state or individual and the constitutionally granted powers of the four defined branches of the government. Specifically with regard to the four defined branches, if this document does not say you can, you can't! And, if it says you can't, you can't!

The new Federal Government of the United States is what it is according to this constitution which is tempered by this Amendment. No seemingly representative alias, legal or otherwise, can ever supersede the government therein defined in any way manner, shape or form unless approved by two-thirds of the People at a new constitutional convention.”

Intent of the Reclamation Amendment

This amendment re-establishes the complete and utter sovereignty of We the People en masse. It further establishes We the People as the fourth branch of the government; the Oversight Branch to serve as the final check and balance with regard to anything put forth by any of the other three branches that might conceivably have the force of law.

The Patriot Act, Homeland Security, the NDAA and any and all other legislation, acts, fiats, orders, memoranda etc. that may have the force of law to any degree and which infringe in any way, manner, shape or form on any of We the People's inalienable rights, shall be stripped of all infringements of such rights without exception.

This Amendment represents the absolute end to the doctrine of Corporate Personhood and any and all activities and unknown contracts and agreements forged by the government that might ever infringe on the power and sovereignty of the several States and We the People. No longer can the System of Jurisprudence be used to contravene the Constitution or the lives of the American People. No longer can the Federal Government and the Courts collude to deceive the American People. Common Law is the Law of the Land.

The nature and practice of religion is put in the proper perspective as regards a secular form of government. The United States is not a religious state! No law shall respect or disrespect any religious establishment or the adherents thereto so long as the religious establishment does not disrespect the law.

Anyone elected to a position of service of, by and for We the People may exercise whatever their beliefs, religious or otherwise. However, the one thing they must do is to put the needs and desires of We the People first, foremost and forever. In that regard, the oath of office to be taken must require absolute fealty to We the People before swearing to uphold We the People's Constitution. The breaking of the oath of office, which goes to the very heart of our nation, is treason.

As the Reclamation Amendment defines what We the People really are, in essence, you will notice that there is no room for the inclusion of any kind of artificial person or entity such as a corporation. The elimination of the concept or doctrine of corporate personhood by not going into a discussion of different venues or views or slants or takes on the issue is representative of the exercise of common sense; you are a person or you are not. Common sense eliminates the necessity of insane detail and the aforementioned is indicative of the manner in which common sense will be injected into the rewriting of our laws as well as any future legislation.

Freedom of the Press and the People's right to know are inviolable. Following ratification, the major media corporations will be split up. Stringent guidelines will be established as regards location and type of media to minimize control and ensure our press remains free. Such guidelines will be enforced without exception and compromise.

How to get the Amendment Ratified

Under Article V of the Constitution, there are two ways to propose amendments to the Constitution and two ways to ratify them.

To propose an amendment:

1. Two-thirds of both houses of Congress vote to propose an amendment, or
2. Two-thirds of the state legislatures ask Congress to call a national convention to propose amendments.

To ratify an amendment:

1. Three-fourths of the state legislatures approve it, or
2. Ratifying conventions in three-fourths of the states approve it.

Some Facts About the Process are:

- Only the first method of proposing an amendment has been used. It's time for the second.
- The second method of ratification has been used only once, to ratify the Twenty-first Amendment (repealing Prohibition). It's probably time for the second usage.
- Congress may limit the time within which a proposed amendment must be ratified. The usual limitation has been seven years. Seven months should be sufficient.
- Thousands of proposals have been made, but only thirty-three have obtained the necessary two-thirds vote in Congress.
- Twenty seven amendments have been ratified (maybe).

A Third Way

I submit that there is a third way to propose and ratify an amendment. Consider that the federal government was created by We the People's Constitution. We the People created it and We the People have the inalienable right to amend it if We so choose. The following interpretation does not follow the letter of the law because the legal system has been gamed by the powers that be. There are roadblocks all over the place to prevent We the People from regaining control of the government and certainly congress would not go along with any such idea. The following interpretation though does follow the spirit of the law.

The third way to propose and ratify an amendment is via the petitioning of We the People. This is strictly a We the People initiative that allows for the inclusion of the sovereign states but does not require them as We the People are the primary sovereign in these United States.

The initial objective is to get the Reclamation Amendment and its ratification on the ballot in all 50 states. If passed by a simple majority vote of the people in at least three quarters (75%) of the states, Washington would be in a bind. We the People are still sovereign under international law and We and Our nation states would be choosing to amend Our constitution. Short of waging war against We the People, overtly or by the creation of false flag events in an attempt to justify same, Washington would have to acquiesce. Now let us say that the majority of people in 75% of the states did not vote to ratify the amendment. We still have an alternative method of ratification. If at least two thirds of all the people nationally voted for ratification, then the Amendment shall be considered as ratified.

There are those who may argue that Washington will not accept such a thing. The reality is that We the People do not accept Washington as it currently functions and We are their creator and their sovereign whether they like it or not. This is Our show folks, not theirs.

The Two Step Plan to National Economic Reform and Recovery

1. Directs the Treasury Department to issue U.S. Notes (like Lincoln's Greenbacks; can also be in electronic deposit format) to pay off the National Debt.
2. Increases the reserve ratio private banks are required to maintain from 10% to 100%, thereby terminating their ability to create money, while simultaneously absorbing the funds created to retire the National Debt.

These two relatively simple steps, which Congress has the power to enact, would extinguish the national debt, without inflation or deflation, and end the unjust practice of private banks creating money as loans (i.e., fractional reserve banking). Paying off the national debt would wipe out the $400+ billion annual interest payments and thereby balance the budget. The following Act would stabilize the economy and end the boom-bust economic cycles championed by the Federal Reserve and caused by fractional reserve banking and a fiat currency.

Summary of the Monetary Reform Act

This proposed law would require banks to increase their reserves on deposits from the current 10%, to 100%, over a one-year period. This would abolish fractional reserve banking (i.e., money creation by private banks) which depends upon fractional (i.e., partial) reserve lending. To provide the funds for this reserve increase, the U.S. Treasury Department would be authorized to issue new United States Notes (and/or U.S. Note accounts) sufficient in quantity to pay off the entire national debt (and replace all Federal Reserve Notes).

The funds required to pay off the national debt are always closely equivalent to the amount of money the banks have created by engaging in fractional lending because the Fed creates 10% of the money the government needs to finance deficit spending (and uses that newly created money to buy U.S. bonds on the open market), then the banks create the other 90% as loans. Thus the national debt closely tracks the combined total of U.S. Treasury debt held by the Fed (10%) and the amount of money created by private banks (90%).

Because this two-part action (increasing bank reserves to 100% and paying off the entire national debt) adds no net increase to the money supply (the two actions cancel each other in net effect on the money supply), it would cause neither inflation nor deflation, but would result in monetary stability and the end of the boom-bust pattern of U.S. economic activity caused by our current, inherently unstable system.

Thus our entire national debt would be extinguished – thereby dramatically reducing or entirely eliminating the U.S. budget deficit and the need for taxes to pay the $400+ billion interest per year on the national debt – and our economic system would be stabilized, while ending the terrible injustice of private banks being allowed to create over 90% of our money as loans on which they charge us interest. Wealth would cease to be concentrated in fewer and fewer hands as a result of private bank money creation. Thereafter, apart from a regular 3% annual increase (roughly matching population growth), only Congress would have the power to authorize changes in the U.S. money supply for public use; not private banks increasing only private bankers' wealth.

Monetary Reform Act

The Monetary Reform Act as presented in Appendix XI is as of October 16, 2011. It is a draft in 17 sections by Patrick Carmack, J.D.; Copyright 1996. All rights reserved. A free copy of the Act, is available in different formats from www.themoneymaster.com who maintains that minor revision of the Act is an ongoing process in response to suggestions received.

“As you know, I am entirely sympathetic with the objectives of your [Patrick Carmack] Monetary Reform Act...You deserve a great deal of credit for carrying through so thoroughly on your own conception...I am impressed by your persistence and attention to detail in your successive revisions...Best wishes, Milton Friedman” -- Nobel Laureate in Economics; Senior Fellow, Hoover Institution on War, Revolution and Peace.

The Finale

Folks, this Monetary Reform Act is a brilliant piece of work although it still requires some tinkering. It essentially cripples the International Banking Cartel in the United States of America. It resolves the National Debt, The Federal Reserve and our Fiat Currency. It eliminates the personal income tax and the IRS since the private credit scam is over and it represents the first step in the makeover of the Financial Services sector.

Taken together, this Act and the Reclamation Amendment, along with the reinstatement of the original 13th Amendment resolves all aspects of the Root Problem. In terms of pure cleanup, it is recommended that the 14th, 16th and 17th Amendments to the constitution be repealed considering that they were never properly ratified in the first place. The 14th Amendment did nothing of consequence for the newly freed slaves and served only to support the argument of corporate personhood. The income tax is dead and so is the 16th Amendment. The 17th Amendment overrode the Founders desire to enhance the sovereignty of the states by allowing them the right to choose their own senators and thereby command equal representation in the U.S. Senate. The States also deserve their sovereignty.

Coming Attractions

The current plans for Book II of the Reclamation Manifesto, much of which is already written and all of which is subject to change, are as follows:

Introduction Declaration of Intention

 This is a play off of Book I's Introduction, the Declaration of Discontent.

PART III Transformation

- Chapter 14 The Transition
All recommended steps to reclaim the government beginning with The Reclamation Amendment. This will be somewhat of a replay of this chapter, Chapter 13 of Book I.
- Chapter 15 The Objective
Future Vision - This chapter is an overview of the entire transformation process as evinced by the titles of the chapters comprising the whole of Part III. The intent of the Transformation is to establish the balance between capitalism, corporatism, individual freedom and democracy within a republic. The chapter gives Congress the back of our collective hand as it calls for the elimination of all special privileges that Congress has bestowed upon itself.
- Chapter 16 System of Jurisprudence
This chapter explains what our legal system is and why it is broken. It explains what needs to be done so that the means justifies the ends; that of equal justice for all. It shows how to create a level playing field by restructuring and simplifying the legal system and our laws; by injecting common sense in lieu of insane detail into our laws and the administration thereof.
- Chapter 17 Corporations
What they really are, how they came about and ways to control them.
- Chapter 18 Banking, Finance & the Monetary System
The entire Banking and Finance system will be broken up and restructured. Fractional reserve banking and fiat currency are gone. Gold, silver and other precious metals will be used to provide real value for the dollar as will some metric of the New Economy.
- Chapter 19 Capitalism
The existing capitalist system will be transformed into Natural Capitalism where the focus will still be on the corporation. However, in this new paradigm, the corporation will be functioning in a world of inclusiveness and responsibility. In addition, a new capitalist system will be created based upon the concept of local area market groups where the focus will be on people and small to mid-sized business. This new paradigm will represent a more social minded world and because the primary focus of the new form of capitalism is on We the People, we have chosen to name it Socio-capitalism.
- Chapter 20 The New Economy
The new U.S. economy will effectively be a hybrid economy consisting of the two new capitalist systems, each of which will effectively be an economy unto itself. The fallacies and short-comings of the existing capitalist system will be illustrated as well as the obvious benefits of Natural capitalism which recognizes the critical interdependency between the production and use of human-made capital and the maintenance and supply of natural capital. The New Socio-Capitalist economy will be driven by the local area market groups that will support a People's Bank that will serve as the fiduciary for We the People. Taken together, these entities represent the Business and Financial engine that will run the new Socio-capitalist economy. The intent of this engine is to minimize the costs of living, provide for the people's entitlements and serve as a farm for the development of small businesses. It will help support and lead to the actualization (personal growth) and creative expression of all the people. Everyone will lead better lives. Along with the genesis of the new hybrid economy will be an explosion of jobs.
- Chapter 21 Globalization
Globalization will continue...differently. It will be driven by trade as opposed to currency. Free Markets? Yes! Unfair competition? No! We the people reject all of the existing trade agreements and treaties that have a negative impact on the sovereignty of We the People. New ways to handle and control world trade and finance will be advanced.

Chapter 22 Military-Industrial Complex / National Security CONTINUE FROM HERE

Teddy Roosevelt was right - "Speak softly and carry a big stick." We have flexed our muscles and spoken much too loudly since World War II. The costs of these continued states of warfare in terms of our children's lives as well as the almighty buck have been far too high. Eisenhower warned of the Military-Industrial complex and he too was right. We are not the World's policeman. We will be bringing our children home and closing most of our bases around the world. We will be refocusing on the research and development of unique and comprehensive defensive systems for the nation and our armed forces in action. Our forces will be restructured according to the constitution and will always be at the ready. New enlistees will take an oath to defend We the People and not the constitution since it is of, by and for We the People anyway. Our Intelligence agencies will get their collective noses out of the homeland and stop fomenting crises in support of hidden political agendas that have oftentimes resulted in contrived warfare. The job of these agencies and/or Special Forces for that matter is to eliminate enemies and ferret out information to protect We the People. Homeland Security and FEMA will be merged, restructured and charged anew.

Chapter 23 The New America

This chapter has been published in its entirety in advance of Book II and is herein presented as Appendix XII - Future Vision. One must know where one is going before one can successfully navigate their way there.

PART IV The In Box

Chapter 24 Healthcare/Wellness

A completely new system within a completely new paradigm. The People's Bank is the single payee solution. The cost of care will be dramatically reduced as malpractice insurance will be heavily controlled and the Legal system placed under the people's microscope. Heavy pressure will be brought to bear on the Pharmaceutical industry and the FDA. Research and development will intensify with a completely new view as to the quantum nature of a human being.

Chapter 25 Energy

The short and long term road to independence. All off shore drilling will be terminated and the Bakken Formation in North Dakota and Montana will be exploited for both oil and gas. Railroad spurs will be built right to the oil fields so the oil can be taken by rail to refineries anywhere in the nation. There will be no pipelines. This will result in complete energy independence and low cost fuel for We the People and businesses. Research and development of new types and forms of energy will replace the need for oil, gas and coal over time. This entire venture is paved with jobs, jobs and more jobs.

Chapter 26 Education / Actualization

Education will be returned to individual state control. The direction of formal education other than liberal arts will conform to national directives in terms of emphasis as determined by a committee that will practice "blue sky" thinking. The committee will consist of representatives from education, business, and government. Civics and the responsibilities of living in a free democratic republic will be emphasized as will higher forms of morality and giving a damn about your fellow human being. In terms of general education or what may be termed "living life," the actualization and general nurturing of every single individual will be facilitated. The importance of the memorization of facts will be downgraded while the way to think, how to view things, will be primary. There is nothing that will be considered sacrosanct or rigid. All will be taught to question everything. Funding will be primarily at the state and local level. Facilitation/funding of the “blue sky” recommendations will be by the federal government and will be apportioned according to state population.

Chapter 27 Immigration

The solution to the problem of illegal immigrants and immigration in general.

Chapter 28 The Media

All government agencies charged with controlling the mass media will be required to eliminate any and all aspects of monopoly. No entity may have control of a majority of the media in any geographic area. No entity may own more than one of each different medium. A true Free Press will be restored as a consequence. Government may not infringe on We the People’s right to use the internet and must obtain a warrant to invade any individual person’s information. Other than public appearances, political campaigns are a creature of the media. Public broadcasting will be expanded in general and be required to facilitate the election process for all candidates at all levels of government. Compensation will be at cost (no profit) and payable by the respective level of government concerned. Only We the People may contribute to a campaign.

PART V In Closing

Chapter 29 Curiosities

Some curious thoughts with regard to 9-11 and JFK.

Chapter 30 Welcome To The Future

Welcome to the new and greatly improved United States of America with its lean and mean government doing only what it is charged to do. Welcome to the new hybrid world of Growth Capitalism; the growth of our people and the growth of our wealth. Welcome to the new beacon for humanity. Now that we have welcomed you, let Book III show you how to really get there.

The current plan for Book III of the Reclamation Manifesto is to have only one part, Part VI - Implementation Plan. How to get from here to there, the New America.

Conclusion

The International Banking Cartel has had an incredibly long run in the sun. That sun is now setting in preparation for the new paradigm. While the means to the cartels desired end were always nefarious and sometimes brilliant, we have learned from them and while we seek to hasten the setting of their sun, we thank them for the education.

More than two-hundred years ago, the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution, and the Bill of Rights created a political and economic system in which individuals were free to express their power to a greater extent than anywhere else on Earth. Government was extremely limited. It was because individuals were so free to express their power that America became the greatest and richest nation in the world.

Since then government has gradually increased its size and power at the expense of the freedom and power of the individual. We have now reached a stage where government power overwhelms individual power. The political and economic system prevents more and more people from expressing their power positively and creatively. But people must express their power. Rather than express it destructively we offer this Reclamation Manifesto as a positive outlet.

The classic line that “Power tends to corrupt and absolute power corrupts absolutely” is wrong according to Stewart Emery, founder of Actualizations. Stewart put it correctly: "Weakness corrupts and absolute weakness corrupts absolutely."

Richard Nixon was not corrupted by his power, but by his weakness. The only power a tyrant has is the power granted by followers. Weak followers surrender their power. The weakness of the followers is a major factor in the corruption of the leader.

America's problems today result from individual powerlessness. The solution to America's problems is the increase of individual human power, that of We the People. The purpose of this book is to provide individual Americans with the way to greatly increase their personal power. If you can all do this on a collective basis, you then represent the solution to practically all of America's personal and social problems.

Listen up folks. If you truly want to change things, as you should, it is up to you - it is up to all of you, all of us, working together, feeding off of one another, willing to open ourselves to knowledge that was overlooked in our old way of seeing things. We are far from powerless. You can see the reality of what can be accomplished. You can see the path to the new paradigm.

Paradigm paralysis, the inability or refusal to see beyond the current modes of thinking, is the only thing that can prevent a paradigm shift. Folks, we have a new world and a new nation to create. We have a new life to live.

Final Conclusion

What the Founding Fathers accomplished was uncommon and magnificent, yet flawed. It is those flaws that have been exploited by misguided individuals and groups of individuals in the age old quest for money and power.

One might say the flaws are the “Root Problem” but, but for the quest for money and power, the flaws would not have been searched for, discovered and exploited.

What Needs to be Done

The mistakes and corruptions resulting from those flaws must be cleaned up and measures put in place to prevent their reoccurrence. This requires redefinition and restructuring and new development. We are going to have a lean and mean government to support our personal growth and self-determination. We are going to have this government protect us without taking anything from us. That is the challenge. That is the Reclamation Manifesto. It is all about the People, first, foremost and forever.

Why It Needs to be Done

People supersede governments. The ignorance of that fact is the great error in the perception, conduct and application of men of power, governments and global affairs. Folks, this is what the course correction mentioned in the Declaration of Discontent is all about. Indeed, this is what the Reclamation Manifesto is all about. That is what it's all about, Alfie!
